

Lottie Loves to Dress Up Adventures in Tairawhitii

Once upon a time, in a cozy little dollhouse nestled in the heart of a vibrant garden, lived a tiny doll named Lottie. Lottie was just 18cm tall, but her heart was as big as the sun in the sky. She had the most enchanting wardrobe and a passion for dressing up that brought smiles to everyone who met her.

Lottie's favourite activity was exploring her wardrobe, which was filled with an array of delightful outfits. On sunny days, she would slip into a simple summer dress with a matching sun hat that shaded her from the warmth of the day.

When Lottie felt like going on an adventure, she would choose comfortable, colourful pants and pair them with a cozy cotton shirt. These outfits allowed her to climb trees, dance in the meadows, and even go on exciting quests to find hidden treasures around the garden.

But Lotties' absolute favourite outfit was a batik lace-trimmed skirt that spun and twirled like a magical whirlwind when she danced. The moment she put it on, she felt like the most graceful dancer in the world.

Lottie was not only known for her impeccable fashion sense but also for her boundless love for her family and friends. She had a dollhouse filled with miniature furniture and every evening, she would gather her family for a cozy dinner. They would share stories of their day, laugh, and cherish the moments they spent together.
