

Maisie's Sleepover Adventures in Tairawhitii

Once upon a time, in a cozy little house nestled among trees, gathered a group of doll friends. There was Maisie, kind and caring, Sadie, an adventurous spirit with red hair, Henry, with a creative imagination, and Yuta, a gentle and thoughtful friend. They loved spending time together, playing games, and going on exciting adventures.

One chilly evening, as the stars twinkled brightly in the sky, the doll friends decided to have a special pajama party. They all put on their warm, comfortable pajamas, ready for a night of fun.

Maisie wore blue batik pajamas, the same as her friend, Henry. Sadie loved the planets and stars on hers and Yuta wore his turtle print pajamas.

The dolls gathered on the couch in the living room. Maisie had a surprise for her friends. She pulled out a beautiful picture book from her toy chest. The book was called "Chopsticks", written by Jon Berkeley. Chopsticks rides through Hong Kong on a carved dragon during the excitement of Chinese New Year. The dolls snuggled close together, their eyes filled with excitement.

As Maisie finished reading the story, the dolls were filled with a sense of wonder and excitement. They realised that even though they were small just dolls, they could go on amazing adventures in their imagination. They knew that friendship and the power of storytelling could take them anywhere they wanted to go.
